FIRST CLIENT PLAYBOOK

Voice notes, written lessons and practical demos for getting your first paid client

How to use this Playbook

This Playbook teaches the beginner foundation: choose one useful skill, turn it into a clear offer, create proof, find suitable businesses, start conversations and close a first paid project. It is not Money Engine. Money Engine is the advanced client-finding system that comes after this foundation.

The teaching format

Most of each lesson is written so you can record a clear voice note or video by reading it naturally. Only the practical parts require screen recording. Keep every explanation simple, then give one small action.

The promise

By the end, the student should have one skill, one offer, relevant proof, a list of potential clients, personalized outreach messages and a simple process for turning replies into paid work.

Lesson 1: Choose one skill

Student outcome: Choose one AI-assisted service to focus on first.

VOICE NOTE / VIDEO SCRIPT

Before you look for clients, choose one useful skill. You do not need to learn everything at once. You can start with AI flyers and designs, UGC videos, landing pages, product visuals or AI video content. Pick the one you can practise consistently and use to solve a visible business problem. Your first goal is not to become perfect. Your first goal is to become useful enough to create one clear result.

WRITTEN NOTES

A skill is something you can do. A service is how you use that skill to help a business. We will turn your skill into a service in the next lesson. Do not choose five skills today. Choose one lane for the next seven days.

ACTION TASK

Write down your chosen skill and three reasons you selected it.

SCREEN RECORDING DEMONSTRATION

- Show the available skill tracks inside Fuse Atelier.
- Choose one track and open its first lesson.
- Show where the student can practise inside Fuse Create.

Lesson 2: Choose a business niche

Student outcome: Choose one type of business whose problems you can understand.

VOICE NOTE / VIDEO SCRIPT

A niche is simply a group of businesses that have something in common. Skincare clinics, restaurants, fashion brands, real estate agents and hotels are examples. Starting with one niche makes everything easier: your samples become more relevant, your message becomes more personal and you start noticing the same problems. You can change your niche later. For now, choose one group and learn what they need.

WRITTEN NOTES

Ask yourself: Do these businesses already spend money to attract customers? Do they use visuals, content or websites? Can my chosen skill improve something they show to customers? If yes, it may be a good starting niche.

ACTION TASK

Choose one niche and write five businesses in that category.

SCREEN RECORDING DEMONSTRATION

- Search the niche on Instagram or Google.
- Open three business pages and observe what they promote.
- Write down one repeated problem you notice.

Lesson 3: Turn the skill into an offer

Student outcome: Create one simple service a business can understand and buy.

VOICE NOTE / VIDEO SCRIPT

A business does not buy a skill. It buys a result. Instead of saying, 'I do graphics,' say, 'I create three treatment campaign graphics that help skincare clinics explain their services clearly.' Instead of saying, 'I edit videos,' say, 'I create short UGC-style product videos that brands can use on social media.' Your offer should say who you help, what you create and why it matters.

WRITTEN NOTES

Use this formula: I help [business type] get [useful result] with [specific deliverable]. Keep the first offer small enough to finish well.

ACTION TASK

Write one offer using the formula and list exactly what the client will receive.

SCREEN RECORDING DEMONSTRATION

- Open a notes app and write the formula.
- Show a vague offer becoming a clear offer.
- Save the final offer where the student can find it.

Lesson 4: Set a beginner price

Student outcome: Choose a price that matches the work, delivery time and your current proof.

VOICE NOTE / VIDEO SCRIPT

Your first price does not need to be your forever price. It should be clear, fair and connected to what you are delivering. A small starter offer could be three graphics, one landing-page section, one UGC video or five product visuals. State the deliverables, timeline, revision limit and price. Do not promise unlimited changes and do not begin a full project without an agreed payment.

WRITTEN NOTES

A starter price is not the same as free work. You can offer a small concept sample to start a conversation, but the complete service should have a price. As your proof improves, your price can improve too.

ACTION TASK

Create your starter package with deliverables, delivery time, one revision limit and price.

SCREEN RECORDING DEMONSTRATION

- Show the package in a simple document or message.
- Demonstrate how deliverables affect price.
- Show the difference between a concept sample and paid work.

Lesson 5: Create proof before clients

Student outcome: Build three relevant samples that show what you can do.

VOICE NOTE / VIDEO SCRIPT

You do not have to wait for a paying client before you create proof. Choose a real type of business and create a concept for them. If it was not commissioned, label it as a concept. Your sample should not only look beautiful; it should show that you understand a business problem. Create three pieces that match the exact service you want to sell.

WRITTEN NOTES

A strong portfolio is not a random gallery. It is evidence that you can solve a specific problem for a specific kind of business. Add a short explanation: what was the problem, what did you create and where could the business use it?

ACTION TASK

Create three niche-specific samples and write a one-sentence explanation for each.

SCREEN RECORDING DEMONSTRATION

- Open Fuse Create.
- Create one sample from a prepared prompt or brief.
- Export or save it in a simple portfolio folder.

Lesson 6: Build a simple portfolio

Student outcome: Put your proof somewhere a prospect can view quickly.

VOICE NOTE / VIDEO SCRIPT

Your portfolio does not need to be complicated. It can be a clean folder, a simple page, a PDF or a social media highlight. Put your strongest sample first. Add your name, what you do, who you help, three samples and a way to contact you. Remove unrelated work. A client should understand what you offer within one minute.

WRITTEN NOTES

Your portfolio is not meant to impress everybody. It is meant to make the right business think, 'This person may be able to help me.' Keep it focused and easy to open on a phone.

ACTION TASK

Create your portfolio and test the link on another phone before sending it.

SCREEN RECORDING DEMONSTRATION

- Open the portfolio tool or folder.
- Arrange the samples in a clear order.
- Open the link in an incognito browser to test it.

Lesson 7: Find the right businesses

Student outcome: Create a list of businesses that could genuinely benefit from your offer.

VOICE NOTE / VIDEO SCRIPT

You do not need to message everybody. Look for businesses that match your niche, already care about attracting customers and have a visible reason your service may help. Check their Instagram, website, Google profile or LinkedIn. Look for new services, promotions, events, weak visuals, confusing pages or active content. Write down the business name, link, what you noticed and the best public contact route.

WRITTEN NOTES

This is manual research, not random spam. Your goal is to understand the business before you contact it. Start with ten businesses and select the strongest five.

ACTION TASK

Create a list of ten businesses and choose the five best fits.

SCREEN RECORDING DEMONSTRATION

- Search the niche and target location.
- Open each business profile and website.
- Record the business link, contact route and visible opportunity.

Lesson 8: Write an ask-first message

Student outcome: Start a conversation without forcing a sale.

VOICE NOTE / VIDEO SCRIPT

Your first message should be short, personal and easy to answer. Mention something specific you noticed. Explain one useful idea. Then ask if they would like to see it. Do not send a long biography or an unsolicited full sample. The goal of the first message is to earn permission for the next step.

WRITTEN NOTES

Use this template: Hi [name], I came across [business] and noticed [specific observation]. I had an idea for [specific improvement] that could help with [simple result]. Would you be open to seeing the concept? Edit every message so it sounds like it was written for that business.

ACTION TASK

Send five personalized ask-first messages and record who you contacted.

SCREEN RECORDING DEMONSTRATION

- Open the chosen contact channel.
- Read the draft message aloud.
- Replace generic lines with a real observation before sending.

Lesson 9: Follow up without begging

Student outcome: Follow up politely and give the prospect an easy next step.

VOICE NOTE / VIDEO SCRIPT

People miss messages. A follow-up is a respectful reminder, not begging. Wait two or three days, then send one short follow-up. If there is still no response, send one final close-the-loop message and move on. Do not send messages every few hours. Do not pressure someone who has clearly said no.

WRITTEN NOTES

Follow-up example: Hi [name], just following up on the idea I mentioned about [specific improvement]. Would you like me to send it over? Final message: No worries if the timing is not right. I will close the loop for now, but I would be happy to revisit it later.

ACTION TASK

Follow up with five people and record the date and result.

SCREEN RECORDING DEMONSTRATION

- Show your outreach tracker.
- Demonstrate adding the follow-up date.
- Move the contact to a follow-up list.

Lesson 10: Handle a positive reply

Student outcome: Know what to say when a prospect says yes or asks for more.

VOICE NOTE / VIDEO SCRIPT

When someone says yes, stay calm. Thank them and ask one or two useful questions before creating anything. Find out what they are promoting, who the audience is, what action they want customers to take and whether there is a deadline. Then explain what you will create as a sample. Do not promise an entire campaign for free.

WRITTEN NOTES

Reply with: Amazing, thank you. Before I put the concept together, may I confirm what you are currently promoting and the action you want people to take? I will use that to make the sample relevant to your business.

ACTION TASK

Practise replying to a pretend yes and write the questions you would ask.

SCREEN RECORDING DEMONSTRATION

- Open a sample reply.
- Write the clarifying questions.
- Show how the answers affect the sample direction.

Lesson 11: Create and send a sample

Student outcome: Create a relevant sample only after the prospect shows interest.

VOICE NOTE / VIDEO SCRIPT

Now create one focused sample connected to the prospect's real offer. Do not create ten unrelated designs. Use their brand direction, audience and goal. Send it with a short explanation of what you noticed and why you chose the concept. The sample is there to demonstrate your thinking and open a paid conversation.

WRITTEN NOTES

Message to send: I created this concept based on the [service or promotion] you mentioned. The idea is to make [benefit] clearer and guide people toward [action]. If this direction feels useful, I can create the complete set for you.

ACTION TASK

Create one sample for a real positive reply and send it with context.

SCREEN RECORDING DEMONSTRATION

- Open your creation tool.
- Show the brief, reference and prompt.
- Send the final sample with the explanation message.

Lesson 12: Present the paid offer

Student outcome: Move from free sample to a clear paid next step.

VOICE NOTE / VIDEO SCRIPT

After the prospect likes the direction, explain the complete paid service. Be specific about what they receive, how long it takes, how many revisions are included and the price. You can say: I am glad you like the direction. I can create the complete set of three graphics, including final copy and export files, for [price]. Delivery is [timeline] and it includes [revision limit]. To begin, I request [deposit]. Would you like me to send the payment details?

WRITTEN NOTES

Confidence does not mean pretending. It means clearly explaining the value, scope and next step. Never hide the price until the client has already agreed to work.

ACTION TASK

Write your proposal using your own offer and send it to a trusted person for feedback.

SCREEN RECORDING DEMONSTRATION

- Show a proposal template.
- Add deliverables, timeline, price and deposit.
- Move the conversation to proposal sent.

Lesson 13: Deliver professionally

Student outcome: Complete the paid work clearly and protect the relationship.

VOICE NOTE / VIDEO SCRIPT

Before starting, confirm the brief, files, deadline, number of revisions and payment. Deliver the first draft on time.

Explain what you created and ask focused questions. Make revisions according to the agreed scope. Send the final files in a clean folder. Then ask for a testimonial and permission to show the work in your portfolio.

WRITTEN NOTES

Professional delivery is part of the service. Reply clearly, meet the deadline you gave and communicate early if something changes. A happy client may return or recommend you.

ACTION TASK

Create a delivery checklist and a testimonial request message.

SCREEN RECORDING DEMONSTRATION

- Show a client brief.
- Show a delivery folder with clear file names.
- Send a testimonial request after completion.

Lesson 14: Repeat the process

Student outcome: Turn your first project into a repeatable client routine.

VOICE NOTE / VIDEO SCRIPT

Your first client is not the finish line. Review what worked: which niche replied, which message started conversations, which offer was easiest to deliver and what people asked for. Improve your samples and repeat the process weekly. Later, Money Engine can help you research more qualified opportunities and manage the workflow faster. But the foundation remains the same: useful skill, clear offer, relevant proof and consistent outreach.

WRITTEN NOTES

Do not jump to a new skill every time someone does not reply. Give your process enough time to produce information. Improve one part at a time and keep tracking your activity.

ACTION TASK

Create a weekly routine: research, send messages, follow up, create samples and review results.

SCREEN RECORDING DEMONSTRATION

- Show a simple weekly tracker.
- Count messages, replies, samples and paid projects.
- Explain how this foundation leads into Money Engine.

What comes after the Playbook

The First Client Playbook gives you the foundation to get started manually. Money Engine is the next level. It helps you define your search, research businesses with current opportunities, generate ask-first messages, turn replies into sample briefs and track the pipeline. It does not replace the fundamentals taught here; it builds on them.

Money Engine Pro

Money Engine and Money Engine Pro use the same client-acquisition system. The difference is that Pro includes Fuse Atelier credits for agent-powered research and creation workflows. Credits can make the process faster, but they do not guarantee that every prospect will reply or buy.

Final 7-day challenge

1. Choose one skill and niche.
2. Create one clear offer and price.
3. Finish three relevant samples.
4. Build a simple portfolio.
5. Find ten suitable businesses.
6. Send five ask-first messages.
7. Follow up, learn and repeat.

You do not need to know everything before you begin. You need one useful skill, one clear offer and the courage to start a respectful conversation.
